

The 14th hole: This hole is not only the longest hole on the course, but it is also the most difficult par 5 on the golf course. A player's tee shot needs to be extremely accurate to avoid trees and bunkers down the left side of the hole and trees and OB tight on the right side. Most players will not be getting home in two on this hole and will only be able to do so if they're tee shot hugs the right side of the fairway. The lay-up shot on this hole must stay to the right to avoid a large magnolia tree guarding the turn on the left. An approach shot over or right of the green leaves a difficult up and down.

- Pete Gettys

This was one of my favorite holes. Out of bounds to the right and trees to the left. You had to hit

Scott Weaver

A hole that the wind defends! If it's into the wind I keep it low off the tee and plan for 3 shots. If I have the wind behind me I tee it high and let it fly hoping to get it home in two. But those trees 🤪. Keep it center cut or you may walk off the green extremely frustrated

Scott Groh

Right side of fairway is the best angle to come in from but look out for O.B. further right. Reachable par 5 with 2 good shots.

Dan Huffman

Scott Groh for you young dudes maybe.

Dan Huffman

Good par 5 for us older guys playing forward tees. Still takes 3 good shots for possible birdie. Out of bounds is close on the right.

Robert Blair

Nightmare for us slicers so try to hit it down left. Then the dreaded straight shot into the trees. At least not the very severe two shot penalty if it goes right. I agree the shot to the green is better from right center of fairway. Left side is mostly cart path as people drive all over that side. Maybe restrict carts further left and allow grass to grow. All in all I like this hole as it provides a real challenge and course management to play it well.

Richard Bruce

If you're lucky, the ball will roll down the roof into the eave trough down the down spout and back onto the fairway 🤪🙏